Military Differential Pay Overview

O.C.G.A. §38-2-279 authorizes state agencies to provide for a military differential pay for employees who are or become a voluntary member of any force of the organized militia or of any reserve force or reserve component of the armed forces of the United States, and as a member of such force or reserve component to be absent from duties or service of the state while in attendance at any service school or schools conducted by the armed forces of the United States or while engaged in the performance or ordered military duty including going to and returning from such duty.

When an employee receives orders for military duty, s/he is to immediately notify the agency human resource office, express a desire to apply for military differential pay and provide a copy of the military orders. The agency human resource office will provide the employee forms for continuation of benefits under the Flexible Benefits Program. These forms are to be completed prior to the employee’s deployment. The human resource office will also provide information to the employee regarding his/her retirement contributions and Peach State Reserves contributions, if applicable.

Military differential pay is the difference between the employee’s base government salary and his/her base military salary. An employee is only eligible for military differential pay when his/her base military pay is less than their base government salary. In order to determine eligibility, the employee should provide personnel with a full month’s military pay voucher within six months of deployment. Depending on when the employee is deployed will determine if the first military pay voucher is for a full month or not.

Employees receiving differential pay should send copies of pay vouchers monthly to their personnel office. Increases or decreases in pay may cause a change or cancellation of differential pay.
