

Best Practices

GENERAL PROPERTY

- DOAS will usually follow the disposal flow: transfer before sell, sell before recycle, recycle before trash.
- Sets sell better than pieces.
- We can't sell a "lot" or "about" quantities. Please give an accurate count.
- If the asset is worth less than $20, consider destruction
- When describing property, think about what you would want to know if your supervisor told you to get something from surplus.
- Just the facts...Don't embellish or diminish the quality or operating condition.
- Always consider cost avoidance. Disposal savings is the same as revenue.
- "A picture is worth 1,000 words." Clear, item-specific photos generate higher sales prices.
- If you're trying to convince Surplus Property to agree with you, send a photo.
- Develop community relationships.
- Negotiated sales to eligible local governments and nonprofits are fast and strengthen your agency standing in the community.
- Books sell very well but there must be an accurate inventory so the buyer knows what they are getting.

ELECTRONICS

For disposal purposes, electric components are classified as hazardous materials by the Environmental Protection Agency. Additionally, there are significant data security issues to consider. See Chapter 15 of the Surplus Property Manual for additional information.

TRANSFER OR SALE

- Agency head or CIO must certify that all data storage devices and only data storage devices have been removed from any equipment that is for sale or transfer to other State agencies. Request must be approved by the CIO.
- Counts must be accurate to the piece.
- If components other than hard drives are removed, equipment must be recycled.

RECYCLING

- Only authorized property disposal signature is required.
- Do not remove data storage devices or other components.
- Equipment must be stacked and wrapped for shipping.
- There is no charge for transportation of electronic recycling.
